Dr. Jekyll Description: Dr. Jekyll allows you to automatically update your Jekyll site each time you publish new content. As you develop your site, you write code using Ruby and the Jekyll Gem. For example, you might write a Ruby program to generate a new post. You then run that program and publish a new post. However, you don't have to manually update your site, which is time-consuming, or write a Ruby program for every new post. Instead, the Dr. Jekyll plugin detects when you have published a new post and automatically sends a request to update the site. There are two ways to use Dr. Jekyll: Manually adding content with Mardown 2.0 or higher and running Jekyll from the command-line Using the Mardown 2.0 Web Client Dr. Jekyll's list of features include: 1. Detects new content and sends a request to update the site 2. Supports Jekyll pages in YAML format 3. Detects the number of changes made to the site and sends a request for updates accordingly 4. Supports GitHub Pages 5. Includes a menu on the site's front page which allows you to update your site at any time 6. Supports Jekyll pages in Markdown format 7. Supports ReStructuredText for creating and modifying a site's content 8. Supports Pages for creating Jekyll pages in YAML format 9. Supports Markdown for creating and modifying a site's content 10. This way, they can be reassured that their business is doing everything it can to stay in the black, thus making future expansions a lot easier. I can't believe you actually made a flickr photostream! It was definitely the easiest way I could think of to blog. I've been wanting to start one for some time but didn't have the time until today. I'm sure I'll find some other ways to blog so if you have any suggestions let me know. What do you do to save money? I don't really think you can save money unless you think outside the box. It's not really possible to save money if you're going to spend more than you make. Money is for purchasing things you want and need. If you're spending the money you make on necessities then there's no point in saving money. I don't shop and don't think it's a bad thing. I don't know how to save money. I have money for whatever I want to spend it on (sometimes). I don't waste money on stuff I don't want and that's what I think is the main problem with most people's spending. It's not hard to say NO to something if you don't want it. I think it's more about getting rid of your shame about saying NO. That's when you'll really be able to save money. I think if you're living in your room eating ramen noodles all day then you're going to need to get a job. I think a lot of people are just afraid to say NO and don't have the courage to say it. That's where most people spend money on things they don't really want or need. You have to step out of your comfort zone and do what makes you uncomfortable. I think what you do most of the time is your biggest saving. That's what most people do. They go to the movies or go out to eat or spend money on things they don't need. You spend money on what you need and that's what you should be spending. When I was younger I would spend lots of money on unnecessary things just because I was too embarrassed to say NO. I think you can save money if you
